Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1400 on Friday 02 Apr 2021

UK Outlook for Saturday 17 Apr 2021 to Saturday 1 May 2021:
There is low confidence for this period, with current indications of a mixed, slowly evolving change in weather likely through the middle of the month. There is no strong signal towards above or below average rainfall at this time. Showers or more persistent spells of rain remain likely throughout, but some drier interludes remain possible. Temperatures may vary around average for this time of year. Towards the end of April, and into early May, confidence is very low, with no strong indication as to any particular weather type. The typical scenario for this period is for the most unsettled weather to affect the northwest of the UK, with the southeast seeing the driest conditions.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.